Article Created: 12 June 1995

Article Reviewed/Updated: 27 July 1995

TOPIC -----

If you click the "off" button in PC Exchange and restart, the PC Exchange control panel turns back on. Is there a way to make the on/off button "sticky" through reboots?

DISCUSSION -----

The off button in the PC Exchange control panel is intended for temporarily disabling PC Exchange. If you turn off PC Exchange this way, on restart PC Exchange turns back on.

To disable PC Exchange each time the Macintosh is restarted, Apple recommends using Extensions Manager in System 7.5 to prevent the PC Exchange control panel from loading.

If you are using System 7.1, drag the PC Exchange control panel out of the System Folder before restarting.
