MacWorks: Localization

This article last reviewed: 19 November 1989

TOPIC -----

Is there a localized version of MacWorks (that is, the bottom two rows on the keyboard are transposed one place to the right, so "b" appears as an "n", and so on)?

DISCUSSION -----

No localized versions of MacWorks were created. Therefore, if you used localized Macintosh System Software, this version of the software assumes that the associated localized Macintosh 128/512K keyboard is being used.

Workarounds might include locating a QuicKeys or Tempo II-like program which is compatible with this older System Software, and which will let you remap the keyboard. Apple Tech Comm is not aware (as of November 1989) of such a program.
