Color Classic: Using It While Travelling (2/93)

Article Created: 9 February 1993

TOPIC -----

I want to travel with my North American Macintosh Color Classic. Can I use it in other countries?

Is there a problem if I take it to the southern hemisphere?

DISCUSSION -----

The Macintosh Color Classic has a universal power supply, which means you can use it outside the U.S. However, you'll need different power cords, which are available where you're traveling.

Your computer's display has been optimized for the northern hemisphere. If you take it to the southern hemisphere, your display will not be adjusted properly. Take it to an authorized service provider for adjustment.
