At Ease 3.0: Labels and Views Control Panels Issue (8/95)

Article Created: 20 June 1995

Article Reviewed/Updated: 14 August 1995

TOPIC -----

This article describes an issue with At Ease 3.0 and how the Labels or Views control panels can affect later users.

DISCUSSION -----

At Ease users in the Restricted Finder environment cannot open most control panels, however they can open the Labels and Views control panels.

Below are possible side affects to this access:

- Users may change the name and/or color in the Labels control panel. This control panel changes the items in the Labels menu so the next user may select the Label menu and see unacceptable words that fit into the Label text field.
- Users may change the Font for views in the Views control panel to Symbol, so the file and folder names become unreadable to the next user.
- Users may select Calculate Folder Sizes in the List Views section of the Views control panel, which will cause the computer to calculate the size of each folder in an open window. This selection could slow the computers operations, depending upon how many folders are present and the amount of files/folders in each folder.
