Macintosh: How To Get Localized System Software and Hardware

This article last reviewed: 30 August 1989

TOPIC -----

Where can I get for the Macintosh:

- 1) The Spanish language system tools.
- 2) The Spanish language keyboard.
- 3) A list of Spanish software.

DISCUSSION -----

- 1) The Macintosh System Software localized in Spanish is available through APDA.
- 2) International keyboards can be ordered through your Customer Support Representative at the distribution center. Because Apple USA doesn't regularly stock International keyboards, you might want to place your request in advance of your need, due to the amount of time it can sometimes take to acquire. Generally speaking, if you have a good source, it is typically faster to obtain International components in those countries.
- 3) This might be more difficult to acquire. We are unaware of any USA-based companies that distribute International software domestically. Of all of our previous inquiries, CLARIS was the only company we contacted that was investigating doing so. Alternatives include purchasing software from a computer store doing business in that country.
