MacTerminal, versions earlier than 2.0: Backspacing

The host you communicate with using MacTerminal may or may not support the methods of backspacing available to you on the Macintosh. To determine whether the host does recognize methods of backspacing used by the Macintosh, try typing CTRL-H to delete a character, or hit the backspace key (upper right corner of the keyboard) to reposition the cursor without deleting the character. If neither method works, you'll need to consult the host's operating manual.

NOTE: In version 2.0, the backspace and delete keys can be swapped.
