Apple File Exchange: Users Guide Error (12/93)

Article Created: 6 December 1993

TOPIC --

On page 256, the Macintosh Users Guide for desktop Macintosh computers (#030-2651-A) says that Apple File Exchange (AFE) comes with three translator files, but it only ships with one translator file.

DISCUSSION ---

It's correct that AFE ships with only one separate translator. However, there are two built-in translators and one separate translator (DCA-RFT/MacWrite). I believe that the author counted the built-in text and binary translators as separate translators because on page 258 the manual contradicts what was written on page 256 and reads that AFE ships with one translator.
