TOPIC -----

Why does "About This Macintosh" call my Macintosh LC II a Macintosh LC?

DISCUSSION -----

The Macintosh LC II ROM is an LC ROM (based on IICI ROM), upgraded to take advantage of the 68030 processor. The System ID byte wasn't changed during development to speed the release of the product. Therefore when you select the Finder menu item "About This Macintosh," it identifies the system as a Macintosh LC.

With the exception of being noted as an LC when viewed in some network management programs, there are no issues regarding the computer reporting back as a Macintosh LC.
