AudioVision 14 Display: Use Monitor To Connect Keyboards (6/94)

Article Created: 6 June 1994

TOPIC -----

The manual that came with my Apple AudioVision 14 Display, states the Apple Adjustable Keyboard must be run through the monitor ADB port. Since I don't own an Apple Adjustable Keyboard, do I use the ADB port on the monitor, or the computer?

DISCUSSION -----

On all keyboards, you should use the ADB port on the monitor. If the keyboard is not connected to the ADB port on the monitor, you may experience problems with the function keys not operating properly, or Video Control Panel loading with an "X" through it. When the control panel doesn't load properly and then you try to open the Video Control Panel the error message "...cannot open, no video panels loaded..." appears.
